

Guide for New Parents

Process for and information on registering the birth of your child

The purpose of this guide is to help new parents submit documents to the registry office to register the birth of a child.

Dear parents, mothers and fathers,

The birth of a child can be an incredibly emotional and even dramatic time in our lives. I would like to sincerely congratulate you as you come through this experience.

As I know all too well from my own experience, these tiny beings not only take hearts by storm but turn entire worlds upside down in the blink of an eye.

We have put together this informational brochure to offer you some relief during this exciting time immediately following the birth of your child. It is intended to help you take care of the necessary formalities and includes important information on how to register your child's birth, naming your child, and the documents you will need.

I would like to take this opportunity to wish you and your little one a great start to this new adventure.

Yours sincerely,

Peter Boch
Mayor

Process for and information on registering the birth of your child

Process

The hospital notifies the registry office (Standesamt) of your child's birth and securely sends all documentation on your behalf, along with the attached form designating your child's name, to be completed and signed by you, to the registry office by hospital courier. To find out which documents you will need to submit, please see the checklist on page 3. All of your documents will be returned to you upon completion of the registration process, together with your child's birth certificates.

Birth certificates

You will receive three designated birth certificates from us, free of charge:

- ☒ one for Child Benefit (Kindergeld)
- ☒ one for Parental Allowance (Elterngeld)
- ☒ one to submit to your health insurance provider (for pregnancy/maternity benefits)

Any additional birth certificates required for your private records will incur a fee of EUR 12 per certificate, plus postage (recorded delivery). This fee is payable directly at the hospital. You can specify this on the next page.

Should you need to order another copy at a later date, simply visit www.pforzheim.de/urkunden (website in German only) to order one online.

The process can take up to 4 weeks. We kindly ask that you refrain from querying the process with the registry office during this period.

Checklist of required documents

Have you already registered a child in Pforzheim, or have you gotten married here and the information we hold is still current? Please let us know. This means that we already have your documents on file in the registry office so you will not need to submit them again.

If translations are required, documents in foreign languages must be translated according to ISO standards by a sworn translator in Germany. A list of translators is available at www.olg-stuttgart.de (website in German only).

Where applicable, foreign documents may need to be notarized and/or apostilled. Please check with the registry office.

All documents must be submitted as original documents. We cannot accept copies.

Information on acknowledging paternity

When is an acknowledgment of paternity necessary?

An acknowledgment of paternity allows the person recognized as the child's father to be listed on the child's birth certificate. This forms the basis for legal paternity, i.e. the consequences of paternity in terms of support and inheritance. Acknowledging paternity does not automatically entitle the father to custody. This must be declared separately in a joint custody declaration. If the parents are married, no acknowledgment of paternity is necessary. The husband is automatically listed as the child's father.

When acknowledgment of paternity enters into force

Paternity can be acknowledged prior to the child's birth, but only enters into force once the child is born. In addition, the mother of the child must consent to acknowledgment of paternity. If the parents are minors, their legal representatives must give their consent.

An acknowledgment of paternity cannot enter into effect if another man has already officially acknowledged paternity, e.g. if the mother is married to another man when the child is born, or if the divorce is recognized in Germany.

If the child's mother is still married, but her husband is not the father, a special case may be considered in favor of qualified third-party acknowledgment of paternity. Please contact the registry office (Standesamt) with any queries.

Contact

Acknowledgment of paternity can be declared at any registry office, at the Youth Welfare Office (Jugendamt), or in the presence of a notary (for a fee). If you would also like to submit a custody declaration, we recommend having this recorded at the Youth Welfare Office (Jugendamt), as this is the only office that can accept such declarations.

Information on naming rights (right of designation)

First names

A child's first names are chosen by their legal parents or by one parent with sole custody. There are no clear legal regulations regarding the naming of children. Generally, however, a child's first name should be recognizable as such, and should not negatively impact the welfare of the child.

If you have any questions about whether a name is legally permitted or the origin of a name, please contact: Gesellschaft für deutsche Sprache e.V., <https://gfds.de/#> (website in German only).

Surnames

- Parents are married and share a common family name: The child is given that common family name as their surname.
- Parents are married and have different surnames: The child may be given the mother's or father's surname. The decision as to the naming of the first child is binding and applies to any subsequent children born to those parents.
- Parents are not married; paternity is acknowledged: The child is given the mother's surname.
- Parents are not married, paternity is acknowledged and consent declared to use their surname prior to birth: The child is given the father's surname. This consent is irrevocable and is subject to a EUR 25 fee.
- Parents are not married, paternity is acknowledged and a custody declaration has been arranged prior to birth: The child may be given the mother's or father's surname. The family name chosen for the first child is binding and applies to any subsequent children born to those parents. However, an acknowledgment of paternity and custody declaration must be made for each child.

All of the information provided is based on German law, specifically naming rights in Germany. Depending on your nationality, legal provisions from your home country and foreign naming laws may apply. If you have any questions in this regard, please contact the registry office (Standesamt).

Use the document attached to choose your child's first name(s) and surname(s) after their birth, and to notify us of their birth. This form is included in this guide.
